Judith Barry, who made the fantastic 1980-81 film Casual Shopper and who currently has work in the Hammer Museum's "Take it or Leave It" show, spent time interviewing women from Cairo. She talked to them about how they navigate their daily lives and how the political situations in the Middle East effect them. Her new show at Rosamund Felsen Gallery, "...Cairo Stories," is based on these filmed conversations. (Editors at Glasstire)
